Title: Field Study Report on Socio-Economic Prospect of Mask Making at Natun Chamaguri Satra, Majuli, Assam

Date and Venue: 24/06/2022, Natun Chamaguri Satra, Majuli, Assam

Chief Supervisor: Mr Uttam Saikia

Total Students: 19

Source of Fund: Funding by department teachers.

Introduction:

Majuli, a river island in Assam, is known for its vibrant cultural heritage. The island is famous for the Satras, which are cultural and religious institutions that have been around for centuries. The Satras are famous for their unique dance forms, music, and craftwork, among other things. One such craft that has been prevalent in the Satras of Majuli is mask-making. The masks made here are unique in their design and craftsmanship, and they are used in various religious and cultural events. With the objective of studying the socio-economic prospect of mask-making at Natun Chamaguri Satra, the sixth semester students of the Department of Sociology from Pub Majuli College conducted a field study on 24/06/2022.

Objectives:

The objectives of this study were as follows:

- To understand the historical and cultural significance of mask-making in Natun Chamaguri Satra
- To examine the economic prospects of mask-making as a livelihood option for the artisans
- To explore the challenges faced by the artisans in mask-making

Methodology:

The students interviewed renowned mask-making artist Dr Hemchandra Guswami to gather information for the study. The interview was conducted using a semi-structured questionnaire, and the responses were recorded. The students also observed the process of mask-making and interacted with other artisans to get a holistic understanding of the craft.

Findings:

The findings of the study were as follows:

- Mask-making has been an integral part of the cultural heritage of Natun Chamaguri Satra, and it has been practiced for generations.

b) The demand for masks has increased over the years due to the growth of tourism in Majuli.

c) The artisans face challenges such as the lack of proper infrastructure, raw materials, and marketing channels.

d) The economic prospects of mask-making are significant, and it can provide a sustainable livelihood option for the artisans.

Significance:

The study highlights the cultural significance and economic prospects of mask-making in Natun Chamaguri Satra. It sheds light on the challenges faced by the artisans and provides suggestions to overcome them. The study also highlights the need for promoting and preserving traditional crafts and cultural heritage.

Suggestions:

Based on the findings, the following suggestions were made:

a) Providing proper infrastructure such as workshops, training centers, and raw materials to the artisans to enhance the quality of their craft.

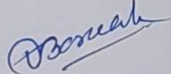

b) Developing marketing channels for the masks to reach a larger audience and generate more income for the artisans.

c) Promoting and preserving the traditional crafts and cultural heritage of Majuli through tourism and other initiatives.

Conclusion:

The field study on the socio-economic prospect of mask-making at Natun Chamaguri Satra, Majuli, Assam, highlights the cultural significance and economic prospects of the craft. The study sheds light on the challenges faced by the artisans and provides suggestions to overcome them. The study emphasizes the need for promoting and preserving traditional crafts and cultural heritage.
